

For international students who are currently working as imaging technologists , there are two options to receive a Medical Imaging Technology degree from OIT:

1. If you have certification from a United States credentialing board (eg. ARRT, ARDMS, etc.), you may be eligible to complete our on line degree completion program See our Medical Imaging Technology web page www.oit.edu/mit for more information.
2. If you are not eligible for the online degree completion program, you may apply to one of the four year Medical Imaging Technology programs. You must have all prerequisites completed or in progress before you are eligible to apply to one of the programs. Information regarding prerequisites and admissions for international students can be found at:

<http://www.oit.edu/admissions/international-students>

<http://www.oit.edu/academics/degrees/medical-imaging-technology/first-year-curriculum>

Oregon Tech does not grant credit for professional work completed at another institution or medical facility, nor do we grant waivers or exceptions to gain admission. This means if you already have training in a medical imaging program, you still need to apply to, be accepted into, and complete the full Medical Imaging Technology program at Oregon Tech. We cannot guarantee admission to any of the imaging programs prior to completion of prerequisites and acceptance through the selection process.